Culinary Department News

There are many new developments in the culinary department!

- The floor of the main kitchen is being replaced. The new flooring is being stored in the Commons Dining Room and installation will begin July 15th. Everyone in the culinary department will do their best to provide meals hot and fast during this time; some of the logistics involved may have them working extra hard so you don't notice when it is being done. The Commons Dining Room door into the kitchen will be inaccessible during the installation, so if you wish to talk to someone in the kitchen, a phone call will be the best way to do that. The phone numbers are at the bottom of this page.
- We have two new Culinary Supervisors and one of them will be working every night of the week and every weekend, if Ross is not here one of them will be. Their names are Sheng Thao and Choua Xiong. Feel free to speak to them any time you wish, they are both brilliant women getting advanced degrees and we are thrilled they are with us.
- The cooks want to start competing with one another on who can make the best food! We will start with a soup category and residents will vote on the best one. There will be a prize for the winning cook, and then they will move on to a different category. Details on the competitions will be announced, and residents will be invited to sample each entry and vote for your favorite one.
- The cooks are also being given opportunities for more creativity with the menu, which is why there are more "generic" dessert descriptions. If one of the cooks says "I want to make my grandmother's apple crisp today" they are encouraged to go ahead and impress us.
- We are following state guidelines for reopening the dining rooms and we are doing it as soon as we can, but your safety and happiness are our primary concerns. When the Terrace Dining Room opens it will be on a reservation basis and limited to two persons per table. We will keep you informed on when we will open things up. Your comments or suggestions are always welcomed.
